Nelson™ Platform Bench

ART THAT WORKS BEAUTIFULLY

George Nelson built his legendary career, and his platform bench, upon the conviction that a product must make an honest visual statement about its purpose. The platform bench is obviously a multipurpose display and resting place in offices, public areas, and homes; with its clean, spare lines, it is also a striking accent piece. Introduced in 1946 and reissued in 1994, the platform bench stands as a landmark of modern design.

SMART AND STRONG

The platform bench is made of solid maple, with slats spaced to let light and air through and legs finger-jointed for superior strength.

MULTIPLE USES

It's whatever you need it to be—a platform for displaying artwork or plants, a bench for seating, or a low table for magazines, a bowl of candy, a TV, or a CD player.

THREE SIZES

The bench is available in three widths and features a solid maple top with clear-coat finish and two ebonized legs.

Height: 14"

Width: 48", 60", or 72"

Depth: 18½"
